To be clear, the "defamatory" statements were in relation to questioning honesty.

Which would have been challenged anyway because none of the 3 comments used against me were a statement of fact. Meaning, the sht y'all say/ask on here could land you in a courtroom if we went by that standard.

Anything that had to do with mental capacity or alcoholism never even made it to the final sheet. So, I know it's hard for people who only read headlines to understand, but The Dream Team did a phenomenal job.

And we all know she lied from July 12 2020 until now, so to claim defamation was a fallacy within itself. One cannot be deemed a credible witness when one was inconsistent. A lie will spread much faster than the truth though & her lies are prime example of that.

tiffanydarling.bsky.social @iTiffanyDarling · Dec 3
The very 1st paragraph of the judgment clearly states that the jury found you LIABLE of defamation per se? Did you not see it or can you not read? It was thrown out on a TECHNICALITY. Why are you acting like that didn't happen? Had you been served, it would've been included.

 God will judge each according to their own standard
 Remember the standard they used to judge you?

'Are you saying she perjured herself?'
 So you say

Well the verdict is in

Draw your own conclusions
 This is a big win for AI
 An even bigger win for NEW MEDIA
